

Dear Colleague,

Increasing number of students are in risk of dropping out from VET schools nowadays in Europe.

It is also a well-known problem that the demands of the labour market and the skills of those freshly graduated are not necessarily compatible with each other. Transition between school and workplace – in spite of all the efforts of educational institutes – is not smooth even among those who have just finished VET schools.

Beside creating a supportive legal framework, one has to guide students as well. It is the teachers in VET schools who can provide this guidance the best. The aim of the CARMA project is to empower teachers to deliver career guidance and foster the development of career management skills among VET students in order to prevent early school leaving, increase motivation and attainment levels as well as employability.

We cordially invite you and your colleagues to our national conference
